FORMER DOR EMPLOYEES PLEAD GUILTY TO CREDIT CARD FRAUD

ATLANTA—Former Department of Revenue employees Marcus Britt, Micah Decuir and William Gladney pleaded guilty on July 18 in DeKalb County Superior Court to Financial Transaction Card Fraud. While employed by the Department of Revenue, the defendants used a co-worker's state-issued gasoline card personal identification number without authorization to fraudulently obtain gasoline for their personal vehicles.

Judge Melvin Westmoreland, sitting in for Judge Cynthia J. Becker, sentenced the defendants to 30 days imprisonment and two years probation. In addition, they have each been ordered to pay restitution to the Department of Revenue. Britt, who pled guilty to nine counts, was ordered to pay $877.53; Decuir, who pled guilty to four counts, was ordered to pay $545.58; and Gladney, who pled guilty to two counts, was ordered to pay $150.82.

Co-defendant John Richardson pled guilty on June 22, 2011. Charges remain pending against the final co-defendant, Billy Evans, who failed to appear in court in June and has a bench warrant outstanding.

Assistant Attorney General Daniel A. Hiatt prosecuted Britt, Decuir and Gladney on behalf of the State of Georgia. The case was investigated by Special Agent Michael L. Bailey of the Department's Office of Special Investigations.
